Hi Mohammed. You have a hearing on November 3 in your rental dispute. Would you like me to explain the latest decision or what usually happens at the first hearing?

Explain the latest decision

The decision means the court accepted your case and set the first hearing, and asked for the landlord to be formally notified so he can attend or respond. Nothing is needed from you right now; your lawyer will attend for you.

Question Q-7731 · Employment & wages · Dubai · arrived 19 hours ago

Can my employer deduct visa fees from my salary?

Your written reply

No. In principle, an employer may not charge the worker recruitment or visa fees, or recover them from the salary; this is the employer's obligation.

If this fee is deducted from you, you can ask for a refund, starting by filing a labor complaint with the Ministry of Human Resources and Emiratisation. I advise keeping the payslips showing the deductions.

📄 Suggested by the assistant: Federal Decree-Law No. 33 of 2021 Regulating Employment Relations and its amendments · The consultant reviews the text before sending

Client's question

I have worked in Dubai for 8 months. The company deducts 500 dirhams monthly and says it's a visa fee. Is this legal? What should I do?

Employment & wages | Dubai | Attached: payslip.pdf

Does it need a court?

If the company refuses and the complaint becomes a labor lawsuit, refer the file to a lawyer with a summary of your reply.
